HISPANIC ORGANIZATION for TOXICOLOGISTS (HOT)

The Hispanic Organization for Toxicologists was founded in 2004 and became a Special Interest Group within the Society of Toxicology in 2006. It is an organization integrated by professionals of Hispanic origin with expertise in scientific areas associated with Toxicology. It serves as a focal point for interaction among Hispanic Toxicologists in the United States and the international Spanish and Portuguese-speaking scientific communities with emphasis in outreach to the Hispanic population. Its main goal is to provide a forum, for the awareness and dissemination of toxicological information and issues as they relate to the Hispanic community. It also provides specific and special support to the SOT on its outreach in global toxicology. One of the Organization's key objectives is to stimulate discussion, increase general awareness, and engage in the search of relevant toxicological information on issues related to the Hispanic community inside and outside the U.S. Other objectives are listed below:

- Develop and conduct programs and educational activities relevant to the Hispanic community
- Assist SOT council by providing ideas and mechanisms to enhance the development of Hispanic toxicology members
- Enhance and advance the professional development of Hispanic toxicologists by several means, including:
 - Sharing of information about research funding sources
 - Provide opportunities and mentoring to trainees and junior scientists
 - Enhance collaboration among Hispanic toxicologists
- Provide a forum at the SOT Annual Meeting for Hispanic minority researchers
- Stimulate new growth in toxicological issues related to the Hispanic community inside and outside the United States as it relates to the science of toxicology
- Act as a resource to the SOT in the area of toxicology

2010 SOT/AstraZeneca IUOTOX Fellowship Awards

Congratulations to the HOT members Jesus Olivero-Verbel (Colombia) and Marcelo Wolansky (Argentina) two recipients of the 2010 SOT/AstraZeneca IUOTOX Fellowship Awards.

Manautou and Fuentes-Mattei Represent SOT at ABRCMS 2009

With SOT sponsorship, José Manautou was a featured speaker at the Annual Biomedical Research Conference for Minority Students \(ABRCMS\) held November 4–7, 2010, in Phoenix, AZ. The title of his talk was "Liver Drug Transporters and Their Contributions to Drug-Induced Hepatotoxicity." Enrique Fuentes-Mattei, graduate student from the University of Puerto Rico, staffed the SOT exhibit at the meeting on behalf of the Committee for Diversity Initiatives.

The majority of the approximately 3,000 attendees are young scientists, including undergraduates, graduate students, and postdocs. Registrants attended a number of inspiring plenaries and information-rich scientific and career development sessions as well as participating in poster sessions and networking. Now in its ninth year and supported by the NIH Institute of General Medical Sciences, ABRCMS is designed to encourage underrepresented minority students to pursue advanced training in the biomedical and behavioral sciences and to provide faculty mentors with resources for facilitating the success of these students.

The Hispanic Organization for Toxicologists is reaching out to identify and establish links with national and international organizations interested and involved in toxicology. We serve as facilitator and catalyst for interaction, fellowship, networking, professional development and the sharing of ideas and knowledge among Hispanic toxicologists. We seek to extend the current knowledge, ideas and research findings of members of the Society of Toxicology as well as from the scientific community to the rest of the Hispanic population. In order to achieve this goal it is essential to establish consortium with organizations in United States and with the international Spanish and Portuguese-speaking scientific communities. We emphasize the need to consolidate knowledge and enhance the transfer of this knowledge to the Hispanic populations. We welcome our sister organizations for their interest, solidarity and commitment to engage in this effort and expand on this common cause.
